

Abstract

A turbocharger arrangement comprises a vane area formed between a nozzle element (21) and a floating insert supported on the exhaust housing, wherein the floating insert is urged against the vanes (27) located in the vane area by a biasing member (43). By means of this arrangement the turbine efficiency is increased and the risk of vane sticking is avoided to a large extent.